RM Results launches online student feedback portfolio for higher education institutions

RM Results recently announced a new partnership with the University of Surrey to develop and bring to market a Feedback Engagement And Tracking System (FEATS), which has been created and piloted by students at the University of Surrey.

FEATS provides a revolutionary way for higher education students to synthesise and act upon feedback received during their studies. FEATS has already received external recognition, winning 'Educational Development Initiative of the Year' at the Staff and Educational Development Association (SEDA) Awards in 2018.

Commenting on the new partnership, Dr Naomi Winstone, Director of the Surrey Assessment and Learning Lab said, "We are really pleased to be working with RM Results so that more students and learning providers can benefit from the system."

John Baskerville, Managing Director at RM Results, added, "We are delighted to be able to offer this new system to universities and we have already received interest from a number of higher education institutions. FEATS provides significant benefits to students and universities, ensuring that higher education experiences are optimised and giving students the best chance of realising their academic potential."
